Bullion - Comex gold futures jumps 0.90% to surge past $2,946 per ounce on Wednesday as safe-haven demand outweighed a strengthening dollar and rising US Treasury yields. Also, Comex Silver jumped 1.80% after February's CPI showed inflation moderating for the 4th consecutive month, with headline CPI rising 2.8% Y/Y, below the expected 2.9% and core CPI easing to 3.1% from 3.3% in January. The softer inflation data reinforced expectations of Fed rate cuts, supporting gold's rally. Meanwhile, trade tensions escalated as the US imposed a 25% levy on steel and aluminum imports, prompting retaliatory tariffs from Canada and the EU. Today, gold maintain its uptrend at $2,953 as geopolitical risks also intensified, with reports of explosions in Kyiv and heightened tensions in Gaza. Traders now turn their attention to upcoming US PPI data, jobless claims, and consumer sentiment reports.

Crude Oil – WTI crude closed higher for the 2nd consecutive session on Wednesday, settling at $67.7 per barrel, buoyed by a weaker dollar and a risk-on sentiment following softer-than-expected U.S. inflation data. Prices remained firm despite a rise in U.S. crude inventories, underpinned by a strong uptick in gasoline demand, which surged to 9.2 m bpd—highest since November. Additionally, OPEC reaffirmed its 2025 oil demand growth forecast, citing robust support from air and road travel. However, gains were capped as OPEC+ production increased by 363K bpd in February to over 41 m bpd, with Kazakhstan exceeding its quota, producing 1.767 m bpd. Today, WTI crude maintains its gains above $67.70, but any sharp upside may be limited as markets await Russia's response to a U.S. proposal for a 30-day ceasefire, which Ukraine has accepted, may potentially boost the prospects for sanctions relief.

Natural Gas - Nymex Henry Hub gas futures dropped more than 8.2% yesterday, closing near $4/mmBtu, as milder weather forecasts for the third week of March and expectations of smaller inventory drawdowns for the week ending February 7 weighed on prices.

Base metals – LME base metals traded mostly higher, with copper gaining over 1% as cooler-than-expected U.S. inflation data fueled rate cut expectations. The metal extended its rally after Trump's recent order to a probe into U.S. copper imports, raising speculation about potential tariffs. Looking ahead, a supply deficit in 2025 and improved electrification demand, expectation of Chinese stimulus, and weak mine supply growth to support prices. Meanwhile, Zinc reached a seven-week peak due to Nyrstar's 25% production cut in Hobart, citing financial pressures. Additionally, China's refined zinc output dropped 7% last year due to lower processing rates. Overall, LME metals may stay firm today, supported by a weaker dollar and renewed hopes of Fed rate cuts.
